SharePoint - Example Uses

Edge Strategies have identified the following 4 top uses for SharePoint:

Departmental Private Websites: For example: Provide a central point where sales staff away from the office can review the latest announcements and access current customer contact history and address lists.

Project management: Store and share the project documents, assign tasks, and track progress and accountability among employees. Share key data with customers and external partners when necessary.

Problem resolution: Log incidents, assign staff, and track resolution for issues such as product returns, complaints, help desk requests, etc...

Centralize official company lists and procedures: Eliminate use of duplicate, out-of-date copies on people's hard drives. Manage the schedule for shared resources: Such as conference rooms, and equipment.
